MURDERED 13, FOUND INSANE

Camden, New Jersey, Oct. .-Howard Unruh, who massacred 18 persons here on September 6, has been found insane and will not stand trial, the Camden County prosecutor, Mitchell Cohen, announced today.

Mr Cohen said four psychiatrists, who had been examining the 28-year-old killer at New Jersey State Hospital in Trenton for the past month; found Unruh to be a "case of dementia praccox."

The psychiatrists said, in a report to Mr Cohen, that, after careful consideration of all factors involved, "It is our opinion this man should be committed to the Trenton State Hospital, where custody, supervision and treatment are available, and the people in the community will be protected from injury or danger should there be a recurrence of his homicidal

Dismantling Policy

IN his first report as British High Com-I missioner in Western Germany, General Sir Brian Robertson states that the Germans could be expected to show increasing opposition to the Allied dismantling policy. "The public outery against the dismantling policy of the three Western 'Allies," he says, "died down with the conclusion of the election campaign. Activity by the political parties, notably by the Social-Democratic Party, in opposing dismantling has not, however, appreciably decreased, and there are Indications that even more determined opposition can be anticipated." In fact. the three-week-old government of Dr Konrad Adenauer has openly asked the "Allied High Commission to put an immediate end to dismantling. These developments, together with the news this week that 44 American. Senators have petitioned the U.S. State Department urging that no more German factories be dismantled, place the question among those of current importance. It will be found on examining the protests, however, that they are mostly based on inaccurate information. It is for from true to say that dismantling has been the cause of serious unemployment in the Western Zones. No less a person than Mr Paul Hoffman, Economic --Co-operation Administrator, told the Germans bluntly in a recent speech that dismantling is not the cause of their economic difficulties. It is natural for the Germans to feel some resentment at seeing factories and plant being removed, and therefore their politicians have made.

clever use of this excuse to further their propaganda. Another point about dismantling that the Germans apparently are unable to appreciate—and, for that matter, many others outside Germany are ignorant of-is that the decision to proceed to take down a modified-list of factories was a joint decision. by the British, French and United States Governments, and was not the decision of the British Government alone. We find, for instance, the same group of American Senators complaining that Britain had recently increased dismaniling in the British Zone. It is because most of the factories are situated in the British Zone that responsibility for enforcing the three-Power décision falls chiefly on the British authorities. When an order is given by a British official, or when British troops are sent to see that the work is done, they are merely carrying out the policy of the three Western Powers. But German politicians, and journalists continue to speak and write as if Britain alone was responsible, and the United States and France had been drugged in unwillingly. It is time that this state of affairs should be corrected. If the British Government and British officials must carry the burden and, at the same time, incur all the odium, it would be better, on this score alone, to stop dismantling. But if, on the other hand, France and the United States want dismantling to continue, they must back up the British Government in carrying out the policy, by word as well as by action. if necessary.

SOLDIER BEMENBERED

WITHKNEVER the fighting men of France meet foday they talk about the war adventures of General Philippe Leclera.

He was really Viscount d'Hautecloque. But when he escaped from the Germans on a bloycle and salled to England in a fishing boat he changed his name so that the enemy would not take revenge on his family.

Lectere flew to France's desert colonies in Africa. With a handful of planes, lorries, and tanks, a few hundred French troops, and half a dozen Britons, he attacked the Italian Army. Then he advanced fighting for 1,200 miles over desert and mountains, and linked up with Montgomery's men.

After victory was won Leclero died in an air crash. Now part of the desert territory he captured from Italy -the Ferran-commemorates this great soldier on a new set of stamps. They show the way his brave men went. And this one also shows Leclere.

AM giving you today's hand L as a lesson on Sheinwold points out in his recent article in The Bridge World magazine entitled "Practical Bridge," the hand also has a very fine point in play. You will notice that Sheinwold does not open the bidding with a three or four spadd bid. You should never use a pre-emptive bid if you, have a sound opening bid of as you do in today'r A pre-emptive bid tells your partner that you do not have the required high card, strength to make an opening bid of one. South should bid one spade and when North over-calls with two diamonds South should rebid his long spade suit, not the four-card club suit.

The bid of two no trump on the part of North contains a lot of Information for South It tells him that North does not have three spades and his hand is pretty well balanced If South at this point were to bid three clubs, it would be an invitation for North to bid four no trump, It might even suggest the possibility of a siam. South knows that his partner has at least two spades, \ as a person rarely bids two no trump with a singleton of his pariner's suit. Also North must have some clubs. Therefore, South is correct in jumping to four spades.

When the dummy goes down it looks almost impossible for South to make his contract, as he must lose two trumps and possibly two club tricks. However, as Mr Sheinwold points out, a little deception on the part of South might give him his contract. The opening lead of the queen of hearts is won with the king, and the spade finesse, taken. West wins and returns n heart which dummy wins. Now South should not cash the aco of diamonds, even though he does not have an entry into dummy. He should another spade. West wins and returns a heart which declarer trumps. Cash all of the trumps but one. East and West, looking at those five dinmonds in dummy, will not discard any of their diamonds, but will let go a club. South has to do then cash the ace of clubs, give up a club and he will make his contract,

A missioner in Western Germany, General

Sir Brian Robertson states that the Germans could be expected to show increasing opposition to the Allied dismantling policy. The public outery against the dismantling policy of the three Western Allies," he says, "died down with the conclusion of the election campaign.

Activity by the political parties, notably by the Social-Democratic Party, in opposing dismantling has not, however, appreciably decreased, and there are indications that even more determined opposition can be anticipated." In fact.

the three-week-old government of Dr

Konrad Adenauer has openly asked the "Allied High Commission to put an immediate end to dismantling. These developments, together with the news this week that 44 American Senators have petitioned the U.S. State Department urging that no more German factories be dismantled, place the question among those of current importance.

It will be found on examining the protests, however, that they are mostly based on inaccurate information. It: is .

far from true to say that dismantling has been the cause of serious unemployment in the Western Zones. No less a person than Mr. Paul Hoffman, Economic Co-operation Administrator, told the Germans bluntly in a recent speech that dismantling : is not the cause of their economic difficulties. It is natural for the Germans to feel some resentment at seeing factories and plant being removed, and therefore their politicians have made clever use of this excuse to further their propaganda. Another point about dismantling that the Germans apparently are unable to appreciate-and, for that matter, many others outside Germany are ignorant of-is that the decision to proceed to take down a modified list of factories was a joint decision -by the British, French and United States

Governments, and was not the decision of the British Government alone. We find, for instance, the same group of American Senators complaining that Britain had recently increased dismantling in the British Zone. It is because most of the factories are situated in the British Zone that responsibility for enforcing the three-Power decision falls chiefly on the British authorities: When an order is given by a British official, or when British troops are sent to see that the work is done, they are merely carrying out the policy of the three Western Powers. But German politicions and journalists continue to speak anti-write as if Britain alone was responsible, and the United States and France had been dragged in unwillingly. It is time that this state of affairs should be corrected. If the British Government and British officials must carry the burden and, at the same time, incur all the odium, it would be better, on this score alone, to stop dismantling.

But if, on the other hand, France and the United States "want a dismantling to continue, they must back up the British Government in carrying out the policy, by word as well as by action, if necessary.

ERIALISMS

A S an illustration of the Western thought and practice and Russian thought and practice, there is hardly a better field than that of Imperialism. On the face of it some of the Western Powers are Imperialist nations. They control vast areas outside Europe and, even today, there are territories in these areas which do not know what it is to have an election.

In its attack on Imperialism. the Marxist theory inevitably joined Imperialism as one of the co-accused, Instances could be clearly cited of the annexation of a country by a Western Power purely to obtain for the trading elements of that Western Power greater security in the carrying out of their commerce. The material assets of the overseas territories of Westorn Powers have frequently been developed almost entirely by Europeans.

MCKENNEY ON BRIDGE

Shrewd Play Can Win This Game

BY WILLIAM E. MCKENNEY

AM giving you today's hand

A as a lesson on bidding. Alfred P. D.S Sheinwold points out in is recent article in The Bridge World magazine entitled "Practical Bridge," the hand has a very fine point in play. You will notice that Mr Shelnwold does not open the bidding with a three or four spade bid. You should never use a pre-emptive bld if you have a sound opening bid of one, as you do in today's hand. A pre-emptive bid tells your partner that you do not have the required high card strength to make an opening bid of one. South should bid one spade and when North over-calls with two diamonds. South should rebid his long spade suit, not the four-eard -club suit.

The bid of two no trump on the part of North contains lot of Information for South It tells him that North does not have three spades and his hand is pretty well balanced If South at this point were to bid three clubs, it would be an invitation for North to bid four no trump, It migh even suggest the possibility of a slam. South knows that his partner has at least two spades, as a person rarely bids two no trump with a singleton of his portner's suit. Also North must have some clubs. Therefore, South is correct in jumping to four spades.

When the dummy goes down it looks almost impossible for South to make his contract, na he must lose two trumps and possibly two club tricks. However, as Mr Sheinwold points out, a little deception on the part of South might give him his contract. opening lead of the queen of hearts is won with the king, and the spade finespe taken. West wins and returns n heart which dummy wins Now South should not eash the acc of diamonds, even though he does not have an entry into dummy. He should another spade. wins and returns a heart which declarer trumps. Cash all of the trumps but one. East and West, looking at those five diamonds in dummy, will not diseard any of their diamonds, but will let go a club. South has to do then cash the ace of clubs, up a club and he will make this contract.
